Mr. GORDON moved the following resolution:—"That the bill when drawn up be submitted to this Conference, to be reported at a time to be hereafter named, for the consideration of each bill."

THE REV. THOMAS DAVITT seconded the resolution, and hoped that no time would be lost.

THE SPEAKER thought it very desirable that the Conference should fully approve of the bill about to be drawn. Coming from that Conference, the bill might then be fairly taken as coming from the body which represented the Church of England in the colony.

His learned brother facetiously suggested that the malicious tones of the unknown Local Court practitioner, who was addressing the Court, had produced a "strong odor" of "chatterbox to emulations." themselves the right of audience was a difficult question. It is the only mode of punishment at hand was their contempt for contempt of Court; but their Honors seemed in haste to stretch their authority in this instance, preferring to endure the unwarranted accompaniment to the discussion of legal technicalities. THE CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS OF SYDNEY.

(From the Sydney Mail.)
No. XL

When St. Vincent's Hospital was first established, its surgeon was the late lamented Dr. Robertson, who was the holder of the office that has since been a real which he displayed in everything which he undertook. During the whole time that he was connected with this institution not a day passed without his visiting it, and he often came there two or three times a week. He was a very kind and considerate man, Dr. Milford and Dr. Brown undertook jointly the duties of surgeons to this institution. About three years ago Dr. Brown resigned and was succeeded by Mr. Egan. The third surgeon, Mr. Wright, has since been added to the honorary medical staff. The gentlemen are all, we are assured, most attentive. With one of them, Dr. Milford, we have had some personal communication in reference to this charity, and he evidently feels as warm an interest in its success as any of the other officers, and is anxious to give his services in connection with it, and anxious as they are, are purely gratuitous.

[FROM OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENT.]

London, 26th February, 1901.

" Patriot of the world alone,
And friend of every country but his own."

Saturday, February 3.
 The opening of the Parliamentary session is a London lively and pens speculate. It will be rather slow work at first, as the M.P.s will take a long time shaking down, and will not have the courage to venture quickly into the arena, fling off their caps and doff for the fight. We do not agree with the remark that they are all courageous enough at the hustings, and it is only in the House of Commons that they tuck their tails under them and hang down their ears. At all the elections we have seen, the would-be members are woefully nervous, turning green, yellow, and red. They dress up very smartly for the most part, put a flower in the button-hole and a new hat stuck jauntily on the head as they can manage on a first performance and are shoved forward by their party to meet the

In some parts the disease continues to spread, with in others it is dying out. In the metropolitan district there were twenty-one cases last week against 24 the week before, and in the country districts 121 against 126 weeks. The North Midland counties show a decrease of 123, the number of last week being 442. The returns for Yorkshire continued to be favourable, 143 against 144 last week, and against 139 in the previous week. Fewer cases occurred in Scotland and Wales. In the North-Western counties the disease continues to spread, 100 cases being reported last week against 97 the week before, and 2964 in the week ending 21st against 2912 in the week ending 14th. In the Northern counties the number is stated at 212 against 216. The South Midland, the South Western, and the Southern counties show a decrease of 12, and the other counties show an increase of cases. The total number of cases attacked since the commencement of the plague 107,608. Of these, 16,136 have been killed, 63,490 have recovered, and there remain 28,062 under treatment 15,227.—Mr. St. John has given the large sum of £150,000 to be applied in behalf of the London poor, has placed in the hands of the Metropolitan Board of Works an additional £100,000 for the same purpose, and has made a donation of Mr. Peabody which reaches the magnificent amount of a quarter of a million.—The Government has a bill for the purpose of arresting the north-westward progress of the plague, the length being carried into practice. The latest news from Constantinople states that the nomination of the British ambassador has been decided, and that his construction will be entirely diplomatic, and that the Congress is expected to meet shortly.

day. His Majesty then, after a long conclusion public, once more appeared in his official capacity, and, in the presence of a vast assembly, of great importance awaiting its attention; the speech delivered under such circumstances can hardly be said to have been equal to an occasion which would have fired the soul, heart and stirred the nerves of the nation. The speech, however, and though important announcements are made, is done in the driest and curtest fashion, so that the whole reads like a succession of those summary paragraphs which newspapers give for busy men to read. The state of our foreign relations is happily such as to suggest nothing but the language of gratulation and hope. We are on good terms with all our neighbours, and the peace of Europe is, of course, referred to as a proof of the friendship existing between the two countries, and of the readiness to act in concert, not as aggressors, but promote peace. It is a very satisfactory to know that Spain is well disposed to accept of the treaty with Chili. Satisfaction is expressed in the speech at the close of the civil war in America, and especially the American people congratulated on the attainment of victory. The speech also mentions the mentioned that the exertions of our naval squadrons on the West coast of Africa have almost annihilated the slave trade. The renewal of diplomatic relations with Brazil, the satisfactory termination of the long and difficult negotiations with Austria, the conclusion of a commercial treaty with Austria, completes the picture in which all the tints are bright. Two subjects—Feminism and the Jamaica insurrection suggest darker scenes, and call up less agreeable thoughts. No notice is taken of the insurrection, but pursued with greater anxiety and expectation in those which refer to reform and the cattle plague. On neither is anything said, except that something will be done. The speech is a very good specimen of parliamentary reform which Ministers intend to present, and this was just what the Speech failed to do. In fact, Earl Russell and his colleagues do not know their own mind, and are waiting for statistics to be brought in before they can follow. The reading of the Speech, serve only to show to what other reform may be a convenient cry for Liberals on the hustings, it occupies a very small space in the thoughts of the Parliament. The discussion of Tuesday afternoon excluded the subject of the Cattle Plague. On the latter question, it is generally confessed that the defence of Government is incompetent. Its policy has been hesitating, vacillating and inconsistent. The Government have been in the loss, has been compelled to grope for safety as he may. The varying and often contradictory of have left them not only helpless, but have brought punishment on him when his simple desire was to be right. Unless the Government can be shown to be brought forward next Monday to be a clear, sensible, and straightforward policy, it may very probably happen that the Government will be forced to resign. The Government's bill upon which it has not yet decided will suffer its first defeat upon a question which never found support upon the hustings last Midsummer. Speaking of Parliamentary matters, the Irish peerage Lord Russell, within the week in the House of Midwinter and Clonmel.

Sir Charles Wood has resigned his post of Secretary for India, and has been succeeded by Earl Grey, whose place at the War Office will be taken by the Marquis of Hartington. Lord Dufferin has been promoted from the post of Ambassador to India to that of Under-Secretary for War, and Stanfield will again join the Ministry as his assistant. Mr. Russell, who has been appointed to the post of Mr. Monnell to the new residence of the British Legation in Paris, will be succeeded by Mr. B. de Trade completes the Russell Ministry.—An important deputation waited upon the Chancellor of the Exchequer, on the 10th inst., to discuss the proposed Malt Tax. Mr. Gladstone, however, held out hopes, but intimated pretty plainly his opinion the Income Tax had a prior claim.—W. D. B. has been elected to the vacant seat of the House of Rush to the Bar of the House of Lords, on Tuesday, to hear the Queen's Speech read. The members of the House of Commons certainly seem to be quite as much interested in the subject as the members of the House of Lords. The same crushing, squeezing and knocking were exhibited by right honorable members by the lowest crowd of any great assembly in the world, and the same "House" was over him.—W. D. B. says he believes the "House" was over him.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer was mal-treated that he retired from the contest, and was afterwards elected to the office of Mayor of the city of New York. He is in front, where he says he was obliged to retire, and that he was not powerful enough to resist the power he possessed to avoid being crushed flat by pressure from behind, and could not, owing to jealousy, strummings, exclamations, imprecations and laudations, get to the front. It is a pretty picture of the most orderly popular assembly in the world.—The police continue to make seizures in various parts of the island—though chiefly in the city. It is a most important significant seizure, and one of the most important reported by the Chronicle Chronicle, that took place at Carnick the other day. This was the arrest of a carriage-sergeant of the 53rd Regiment, who is said to be a member of the Society, and along with him a number of the same organization. The carriage-sergeant of the same regiment at the railway station, several civilians had been arrested. It is to be hoped an example will be made of these military conspirators.

between the Russian Parliament (Duma) and the Government. The Crown continued to insist that the Duma has attempted to add to its present power by putting the members of the Chamber of Deputies remarks made by them in their speeches. Had the Duma been successful in this policy, it is easy to see that it would have been able to place itself within its power. The experiment was made on members, named Smetsen and Frenzel. On the 17th the Progress party resolved to bring forward a protest against the Government's reference to the decision of the Supreme Court of Cassation, which had acceded to the demand of the Public Prosecutor to initiate proceedings against the abovementioned members. The protest was to the effect that the Government had exceeded its powers of authority, and that the Supreme Court had infringed the rights of the Chambers. The Chamber of Deputies, therefore, protested against such encroachments, and against the illegality of prosecuting members on account of speeches made in the Chamber. The protest was moved on Saturday, and a debate followed, when it was decided that the Ministers of Justice should be requested to be present at the Chamber on the same day, after which the bill had been brought in.

of extraordinary supplies on account of estimates, the Chamber of Deputies asserted its importance by contending that the annexation of Laubenburg to the Prussian Crown was illegal and unconstitutional. The Minister of Finance, Bismark, in reply, stated there was no necessity in submitting the question to the Chamber at all; but, upon point 44, the original motion was carried by vote against 44, thus giving the Parliament a partial victory. The Chamber then expressed its important and constitutional opinion that the Spanish Government is at last awakened to sense of the danger pressing upon it, and has decided to send letters of marque against Chinese vessels. The Finance Minister, in reply, pressing, and various schemes are being concocted temporarily removing them. The Minister of Finance has just presented to the Congress a bill assigning 100 millions of reals to the Bank of Spain. This sum has been voted by the public domain, or Crown estates. A bill is to be introduced for the liquidation of the public debt. When the address, in reply to the Speech from the Throne, was read, the Chamber was lamenting the financial difficulties of the kingdom which are increasing day by day, and ruining agriculture and manufacture. As it is impossible to raise more taxes, it was proposed to lower the expenditure by 100 hundred millions of reals, in order that the present year should be averted, and Spanish credit restored.—Disturbances have again broken out in Syria. Three thousand Turkish disbanded at Beyrout on the 10th of last month, a detachment of 1,000 men was sent against the village of Zaghra, which was burnt.

Saturday, February 1

Government has lost no time in fulfilling the wish made in the Queen's Speech to call the attention of the House to the expediency of amending the law relating to the exportation of the hides of the scourge, the Cattle Plague. On Monday the Bill Secretary introduced into the House of Commons a Bill with that object. In framing the Bill Government has had a difficult task to perform. Conflicting opinions had to be reconciled. It was necessary to deal with, with promptness and confidence, and such an amendment of the law had to be devised which would secure the confidence of Parliament and be suitable to the country at large. The opportunity of the measure is to prevent a prevalence rather than of a curative character. The bill now

Lord Kingsdown, formerly Mr. Palbertain, has, on account of the increasing infirmities of age, determined to retire from active participation in the duties of the judicial committee of Privy Council, where his presence will be much missed. Before his retirement, he had been twice summoned into Parliament in 1831, took the estates and care of his mother's family, Leigh, in 1843, was made Attorney-General to the Prince of Wales, and after Lord Colclough to the Royal Highness, was, in 1845, offered the post of Lord Deputy of the Admiralty, but declined it. Lord Kingsdown was elevated to the peerage as Lord Kingsdown in 1846. He had, rather arbitrarily, dismissed Col. Coles, the inventor of the turret iron-clad vessel, in the letter of a London newspaper, edited by Mr. Reed. Mr. Reed, the chief architect in the employ of the Admiralty, probably felt some jealousy of Captain Coles's invention. The latter has frequently complained that he was not allowed to show the value of the turret system of armament by building a ship built on the principle, and as long as he confined himself to that point, he was allowed to in a very freely in newspaper correspondence. Finally, he was not allowed to show the value of the system, and he was charged with wasting public money on useless experiments, while they "bunking" the plan which, as he supposed, he was especially engaged to superintend. This discomfited him on the ground of being out of the rule of the service; but whether the Admiralty can justify treatment of the Captain with regard to his invention is another question which, no doubt, we shall hear of again. The jeweller, Mr. Milner, who has been robbed of six thousand pounds worth of jewellery, a twelve-months' subscription to an action against Mr. Milner, the well-known jeweller, to recover the amount of the loss, with reference to a safe, which had been given as a thief-proof, but had been broken open by burglar. The action is one of no small importance to the mercantile world, and its details were rendered interesting by the fact that the burglar was a woman, who stated how the safe was opened and the time it took to do it, viz., about thirty minutes, stopping at intervals as they heard the tramp of the policeman's boots. Eminent engineers also proved that the safe could be opened by a woman, and that the burglar was a woman. The plaintiff claimed about $2500, but the action was ultimately non-suited.—An action for libel was tried the other day in London, disclosing vicious practices which it appears has been going on for many years in the criticism of the morning papers, the Post and Star, of giving concerts at which they obtain the gratis services of distinguished vocalists and performers. The plaintiff, the Illustrated London News, the Standard critic, Mr. Desmond Ryan, being influenced by corrupt motives in the discharge of his duties. It failed to sustain this allegation, the jury mulcting the proprietor in $2500 damages, and the defendant in $500 costs. The defendant once wrote beforehand a most elaborate and courteous notice of a performance at the opera, which was published, and the paper of the same day announced that the performance had been unavoidably postponed owing to the sudden illness of the domina.

A STRANGE SCENE AT A MARRIAGE.—The Jews says that, according to an old custom of Vienna, Austria, there exists a ceremony of showing to the assembled friends of the bride and groom the various presents and gifts, with the names of the various donors. Aiding has lately taken place at Vienna, between a wealthy Jew and Jewess, and, agreeably to custom, the bride presents and gifts were exhibited to the guests. A large number of papers were sealed, bearing on the outside the name of the donor. "Enclosed is the tender correspondence between your young wife and the actor W.," signed, "Your sincere friend." On the examination of its contents it may easily be imagined that the bride and groom were not very intimate friends. The party was consequently soon broken up to a finish, and endless trouble commenced to the honeymoon. It is positively asserted that following his marriage the bridegroom gave instructions for a divorce from his new bride. It is doubted if he can obtain it by the Austrian law, the sacred act.

The consumption of wines in the United Kingdom, according to the returns of last year, reached a million gallons per month, which is just double what it was before the reduction of duties.
